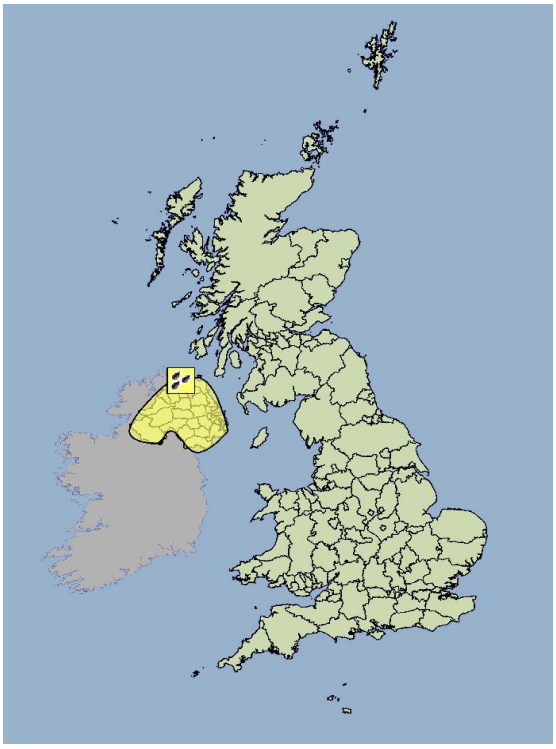
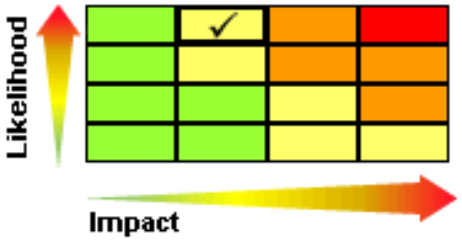
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Rain will spread into Northern Ireland on Thursday morning, turning persistent and occasionally heavy in the afternoon and lasting well into the evening before dying out.

20 to 40 mm of rain within 12 hours, (perhaps nearer 60 mm over the Mournes) falling on already very wet ground, seems likely to lead to flooding of some prone locations.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Thu, 19th Oct 2017 until 23:55 on Thu, 19th Oct 2017

Heavy rain will affect Northern Ireland later on Thursday.

This will fall onto saturated ground and is likely to lead to flooding in places; delayed travel may well result, including through the busy evening period. It is possible that a few properties or businesses could also be affected.
